By Green, Norman

HarperCollins, Scranton, Pennsylvania, U.S.A., 2001. Hard Cover. Book Condition: New. Dust Jacket Condition: Very Good. Dust jacket glued to front cover. Stamp on first page. This is the story of three men. There's Fat Tommy Roselli, also known as Tommy Bagadonuts, whose flamboyant style and open heart belie his sharp eye for a quick deal. Then there's Stoney, Fat Tommy's partner in a shady junkyard business on Troutman Street, whose cynicism and brutality almost save him from his alcoholism. Finally, there's Tuco, their young, street-smart apprentice, whose bravado and cunning hide his innocence, his insecurity, and his desperate desire to belong. All three are on an inevitable collision course with violence, on "a one-way street that runs from nowhere to nowhere. A street of failures. Fall through the cracks of a better or kinder world, and you find yourself on Troutman Street." Three men in search of redemption, and for each of them, there seems to be only one way out.
