

I Won't Learn from You: And Other Thoughts on Creative Maladjustment (Paperback)

By Herbert R. Kohl, Jonathan Kozol

The New Press, United States, 1995. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 2nd Revised edition. 208 x 135 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book. I won't learn from you is Herb Kohl's now-classic essay about the phenomenon of not-learning, or refusing to learn, which takes place when a student's intelligence, dignity, or integrity is compromised by a teacher, an institution, or a larger social mindset. Available in book form for the first time, I Won't Learn from You serves here as a starting point for four new, groundbreaking essays by one of the country's leading thinkers on education. The Tattooed Man: Confessions of a Hopemonger is about the importance of teaching hope, and is Kohl's first autobiographical effort to discover in his own ghettoized childhood attitudes that let him recognize not-learning when he saw it among his students decades later. Creative Maladjustment and the Struggle for Public Education is inspired by Martin Luther King, Jr.'s call for creative maladjustment to an unjust society, and deals with the ways in which one can lead a positive life and learn new ways of maintaining opposition and resistance. Excellence, Equality, and Equity explores the relationship between these...

READ ONLINE
[2.96 MB]

Reviews

Absolutely essential read publication. it absolutely was writtern very completely and valuable. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.

-- Sarai Lebsack

Thorough guide for book enthusiasts. I am quite late in start reading this one, but better then never. Your lifestyle span will be transform when you total reading this article book.

-- Lindsey Larson