Harvard University was probably the pioneer, for the courses offered by Dean Shaler were the first collegiate instruction assigned to the summer season. Other universities, notably Columbia University, soon after established summer courses, and, exceeding Harvard in the liberality of recognition of such courses as giving credit for the degrees, early made their summer instruction an integral part of the work of the year. The idea, therefore, has had an ever-increasing acceptance in the universities of the country. It has spread more slowly, however, to other educational institutions, such as normal schools and other institutions under public control. Nevertheless, there is a general acceptance of the idea, and the custom may now be said to be prevalent, especially in the more important institutions of learning. This is not true, however, of the secondary and elementary schools, as...
