There s a Thing on a pile of wood, Painted, and gilded, all about, That would bribe Wisdom, if t could, To join in Grandeur s silly shout, And fawn around a little clay, That shrinks from the curse of yesterday. Tis the Pet of Pride, and Fame, Who bolster its sickly honours up, While Wisdom turns his head, in shame, And spurns sly Flattery s wildering cup J All who take it to their lips, Grow blind, and grope in Truth s eclipse. Tis Folly fleshly God--a King, That bends but to the belly-ache, Death laughs at its...
